Critical NMD construction contract awarded

By Jim Bennett

The Corps of Engineers awarded a $6.2 million contract on June 15 to Fletcher Pacific Construction Company Ltd., of Guam, for Ground-Based Interceptor test facilities on Meck Island, including the construction of two missile silos to be used in the NMD test program.

According to Gene Dohrman, USAKA/KMR project manager,

Fletcher Pacific received notification to proceed June 23, and representatives visited the site this week to make preparations. The work must be completed by May 1, 2000.

"It's a fast-track project with a very tight schedule, but it has to be in order to not delay the NMD test schedule next year," Dohrman said.

The work will include excavating the 70- to 80-foot holes in Launch Hill, where the company will install silo liners. A Silo Interface Vault will be installed adjacent to the silos. The SIV provides the necessary equipment to produce an operational missile silo. Both the liners and SIV are being built by the Boeing Company under a separate contract.

The Fletcher Pacific contract also calls for the completion of smaller-scale work on Meck such as the extension of an existing missile assembly building and the demilitarization of two Sprint missile silos.

Program rewards safe job practices

By Julia Olson
RSE Safety Office

Raytheon Range System Engineering kicked off a new safety awareness program last week, with the awarding of gift certificates to 400 lucky and safe employees.

The 400 winners last week worked at least 75 percent of their scheduled hours with no OSHA recordable injuries during the award period of January to April. RSE will award 200 more gift certificates next week to employees who met the same requirements from May through June.

The program, Recognition of Safety Excellence, is an important component of the company's strategy to reduce workplace injuries by 30 percent each year. Raytheon has reduced workplace injuries by 30 percent each of the past two years.

The program itself is made up of four parts.

□ Monthly awards—One hundred randomly selected employees receive a $20 gift certificate.

□ Quarterly division recognition—Each division that reduces its injury rate from the same time period last year receives a brass plate to add to the division plaque.

□ Quarterly special awards—Nominated employees and workgroups receive special awards for demonstrating safe work practices that go beyond expectations.

□ Annual awards—A minimum of $5,000 has been set aside in a fund, which grows every month the RSE injury rate declines by 30 percent or more. Thermometer signs, posted in various work areas, track additions to the fund. At the end of the calendar year, the money will go toward five $1,000 cash awards and a variety of merchandise awards, which will be awarded based on the same requirements as the monthly awards.

Final Independence Day of 20th century to be marked

Following is a joint message from Louis Caldera, secretary of the Army, and Gen. Eric K. Shinseki, Army chief of staff.

We celebrate the last Independence Day of the 20th century with pride in our past, with determination as we confront present challenges, and with optimism for our future.

America's Army was the first fighting force to light a torch for liberty. Never before had an army been the instrument of the people, a protector of their rights, an agent of the popular will. The Colonial Army fought a war to uphold the principles of the Declaration of Independence, and, in doing so, established tradition of Army values that remains with us today.

In the final decade of this century, America's Army has extended the mantle of liberty to freedom-loving people around the globe. Our soldiers keep freedom's torch burning and have extended its light world-wide—in Panama, the Persian Gulf, Somalia, Haiti, and now in the Balkans and contingency operations around the world.

You, the soldiers of today, spread good will wherever you go. You are the map-makers, guiding newly emerging democracies along the pathways to freedom.

We wish all of you in the Army family—soldiers, civilians, family members, friends, and colleagues—a safe and happy Independence Day.

Understanding the government of the Republic of the Marshall Islands

By Lawrence N. Edwards,
Former RMI Ambassador to the UN

Conclusion

Public Service Commission

The Public Service Commission is the employing authority for the Public Service, and has the general oversight and control of its organization and management. The commission is responsible for reviewing the efficiency and economy of all departments and offices of the government.

The Public Service Commission consists of a chairman and two other members.

In general

All political activities are handled by the Nitijela (Legislature) and the Cabinet for all departments and offices in the Marshall Islands.

Financially and economically, no taxes can be imposed or other revenue raised, and no public money can be expended unless authorized by law.

It is the responsibility of the Cabinet to make proposals to the Nitijela on all matters pertaining to the budget, and all expenditures of public money must have the approval of the Cabinet or of a person or body to which such authority has been delegated by law.

The Marshall Islands are limited in their own resources to copra, fish, handicraft, and income taxes from businesses and employment by the private sector and the government.

The most beautiful thing about the government of the Marshall Islands is that no single person or any single body, department, or office can make a final decision. That is a collective responsibility of the Nitijela, the Cabinet, the Public Service, the Public Service Commission, and the people of the Marshall Islands.

Seal of government

The seal of government of the Marshall Islands incorporates symbolism from two old Marshallese sayings.

The first of these is included in the seal: Jepilpilin ke ejukaan. It translates approximately as, "Everyone in the Marshall Islands has a role to play. If one person is not able to continue, another will rise to take his place." In the past, this saying was applied to the chiefs.

The seal of government of the Marshall Islands is based on the symbolism in two old Marshallese sayings.

The second of the old sayings lists the five most important things to a Marshallese: "ourselves, our mother, our boat, our fishing net, and our pandanus pounder."

The figure in the center of the seal represents the mother; the boat is at lower right, with the net above it; and the pandanus pounder is at upper left. At lower left are shown the ocean, the land, a palm tree with coconuts, a breadfruit tree, and taro plants. Centered at the bottom is a Marshallese stick chart.

The 24-point star is taken from the Marshall Islands' flag, where it represents the municipalities of the RMI. The longer points represent Majuro, Ebeye, Wotje, and Jaluit. They also represent a cross, signifying the importance of Christianity in the Marshalls.

The chain surrounding the design signifies that Marshall Islanders are bound together to make the best of these islands.

The information in this three-part series was excerpted from a speech made by Lawrence N. Edwards at Kwajalein in 1980. At that time, he was representative of the chief secretary of the Marshall Islands to Kwajalein Atoll. After a long career in RMI government service, Edwards retired to Majuro, where he now lives with his wife, Neijon.

Jeramon non kom

"Jeramon non kom" is the Marshallese way to say, "Goodbye and good luck, friends."

Bonnita Matsuda departed July 1 on ATI to join her husband, Percy, in Leesburg, Fla. He is recuperating from a work-related injury to his right foot. Bonnita reports that he is healing quickly, and was expected to leave the hospital on crutches July 1.

Marjie Corbin, Hobby Shop coordinator for the past two years, departs July 6 for Eugene, Ore. She plans to play with a brand-new niece and explore the area.

She says, "It's been fun. Keep up the creative work in the Hobby Shop, and come visit me in Oregon."

Mike and Laurie Minardi and children, Rebecca, Jack, Kellyann, Dianne, Joseph, and Mark, depart July 6 on ATI. Mike worked for MIT/Lincoln Laboratory. They are going to Dayton, Ohio, after a three-year second tour. Their first tour was 1984-88.

"We'll miss our good friends and relaxing evenings at Emon Beach," the Minardis say. "We'll be back when they finish Phase I of the new five-bedroom housing."

Maj. Derik Crotts, wife, Danna, and sons, Caleb and Joshua, depart July 8 on AMC, after a two-year tour. They are headed for Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., where Derik will be director of public affairs. At Kwaj, he was assistant chief of staff for intelligence and security.

They say, "This is one of the best assignments we've had. We would definitely consider coming back if the opportunity presents itself."

Former resident Ed May passes away

Former Kwajalein resident Edward G. May passed away May 30, at his home in West Virginia. He is survived by his wife, Joyce; son, Matthew; and daughters, Ellen and Karen.

May was a radar systems engineer who had two tours on Kwaj with his family. He worked at Tradex 1970-77, and at Altair 1981-90.

Cards and letters of condolence may be sent to the family at 128 Summit Ridge, Hurricane, W.V. 25526. Donations may be made in May's name to the Leukemia Society of America, Myelofibrosis Research, 600 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Bert R. Scott III, "the guy in the tie," is making some dramatic changes in the Kwajalein landscape. As installation manager, he has undertaken an islandwide cleanup and beautification campaign and the creation of a botanical garden. "That's just the beginning," says Scott, who defines his job as improving the quality of life at USAKA/KMR.

New guy in town wants to make things better

There's a new guy in town who wants to change your life. The quality of your life, that is.

He is Bert R. Scott III, "the guy in the tie," recently appointed installation manager. He's been causing a stir because he shows up for work every day wearing a white dress shirt with a bright tie and tie tack—not your usual Kwaj outfit.

Scott is getting attention, too, because of his approach to installation management. Soon after his arrival March 30, he began a campaign to enlist cooperation and assistance for a clean-up, fix-up campaign on what he calls the industrial end of Kwaj.

With FOM, the environmental offices, and master planners involved, some dramatic changes are taking place in the area south of the fire station. As Scott pointed out during a quick tour by golf cart, the area looks much neater than in the recent past. Stockpiles of scrap lumber and metal and heaps of rubble and trash are mostly gone. Scott has designated storage yards and areas out of public view, where usable material has been moved and organized. The mancamp area has been cleaned up, and the trailers will soon be gone.

Most dramatic of all, a beautifully manicured garden spot is appearing just south of Coral Sands Beach, along Lagoon Road. Years ago, a couple of Kwaj residents established a hydroponic garden there. The garden was a great success, producing vegetables as well as flowers, but time passed, the principals PCSed, and the area became an overgrown jungle.

Scott is enthusiastic about the possibilities of the place. He sees it becoming a favorite picnic spot, with tables in the deep shade under breadfruit and allspice trees, and a botanical garden where Kwaj schoolchildren—adults, too—can learn about plants indigenous to the Marshalls.

What has happened so far is just the beginning for Scott at USAKA/KMR. Among the challenges he sees are these:

- ☐ Clean up the island
- ☐ Improve the quality of life
- ☐ Provide better services
- ☐ Conserve energy
- ☐ Increase environmental awareness and compliance
- ☐ Curb apathy
- ☐ Beautify the island
- ☐ Improve space management
- ☐ Become more customer-service oriented

Scott came to USAKA/KMR after a long assignment in Korea. In his 34 years of service with the federal government as an engineer, he has been assigned as installation commander, director of public works, deputy commander, and deputy resident engineer. He holds the Legion of Merit and the Corps of Engineers Productivity Improvement Award.

Accompanying Scott at Kwajalein are his wife, Su; son, Rory, 12; and daughter, Michelle, 9.

Housesitter (PG)

Steve Martin and Goldie Hawn star in this romantic comedy about loving, lying, and living together. This is the fun-filled story of a quirky conartist who deviously moves herself into Martin's vacated country home, passing herself off as his wife, much to the surprise of his family and friends, not to mention Martin himself. This leads to some funny results, as she wins over his friends and family. (100 minutes)

Bargain Bazaar volunteer Pat Savage, left, and co-chairwoman Nancy Bradshaw assist customers at the thrift store. Sponsored by the Yokwe Yuk Women's Club and staffed by members, the store is a favorite shopping spot for our Marshallese neighbors and Kwaj residents. Profits are used for educational assistance and special projects.

Bargain Bazaar has more than one role

The Bargain Bazaar traces its history to the early 1960s, when Navy officers' wives at Kwaj founded a thrift store. Not long after the Army took over management of Kwaj in 1964, the Yokwe Yuk Women's Club took over the store, renamed it the Bargain Bazaar, and determined that profits from the operation would be used to help with educational assistance and special needs of the Marshallese people at Kwajalein Atoll.

Funding is also made available for the YYWC Christmas cultural exchange with Ebeye and assistance with travel expenses for medical patients.

Sponsored by the YYW C and staffed by members, the Bargain Bazaar solicits donations from Kwaj residents of clothing, shoes, household goods, toys, books, and just about anything useful or beautiful. All donations are greatly appreciated, but items should be in usable condition.

Take donated items to the Bargain Bazaar, near Echo Pier and the DSC, on Mondays, Thursdays, or Saturdays, between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. If your donation is large, call Nancy Bradshaw, 53661, for pickup.
